How are other companies using our chocolate?

FOR A COMPANY'S 50TH anniversary they created custom chocolate cookies reflecting a big 50 and the year they were established. The cookies were packaged in a custom printed box that showed the original office building from 1966 along with the signatures of all current staff on the back of the box. Despite some saying it was too special to eat, it was a memorable hit that the company continued to use for events and different tradeshow applications all year round.

A CONSTRUCTION COMPANY celebrated their milestone "100 Homes Built" by hosting an open house and handing each guest a 2lb chocolate bar. Their detailed floorplan was engraved in the bar along with their logo in the dark chocolate center, which they topped off with an amazing image of a home on the custom printed lid. They also used the set for marketing to prospective clients and thanking their subcontractors on all of their projects.

A COUNTRY CLUB used the Deluxe Trio wallet to feature an aerial map of the entire premises printed on the inside of the wallet and each trio box highlighted features of the club. The amount of print space available on the wallet allowed them to stand out, send a message, and provide incentive, without overshadowing that it also featured NINE pieces of foiled, custom engraved chocolate. The golf course agreed this was by far the most creative marketing piece they'd offered their clients.

A SOFTWARE COMPANY CREATED a custom 2x5 wrapper bar to take with them to a tech tradeshow as a hand-out, with the custom wrapper featuring tons of printed information. A few bars also contained a "golden ticket" which won the ticket holder a desirable prize! They were able to attract more attendees to their booth than ever before and capture many "hot leads" including one that resulted in their largest account!
